DISMANTLING OLD ST. JAMES

Pipe Organ Taken out. Bell Comes down from Cupola. Pews Stored away. Library and Piano in T. M. C. A. Rapid Work.

Work at dismantling St. James church has gone on rapidly since Monday that practically nothing remains now but the bare structure and that will be razed as soon as possible.

The pipe organ was taken down by an expert from the factory and stored in the storage house of the Gettysburg Department Store where it will be kept to be rebuilt after the new church is ready for it.

The pews were all removed early in the week and placed in the rear and sides of the various members. All the members who wish to purchase the pews they were accustomed to use will be allowed to do so and some have already taken advantage of this opportunity, converting the pews into pens for fowls. It is probable that those not disposed of will be used either in the library of the new church or the gallery of the new Sunday School but it is thought probable, as will the old bell, and yet all new ones if possible.

The bell was taken down from the cupola by removing the staircase at the northwest corner and using it straight down the tower to the bell. It is to rest in the vestibule of the new church until the new church is erected when it will find place there.

Mr. Jobes, the contractor, is taking charge of the windows which are to be used in the new church, with care.

The piano and library have been taken from the Sunday School room placed in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Baltimore street where they will remain until needed again at the church.

Work at tearing out the interior of the building is going along rapidly now and it will be but a short while before the walls alone will be left standing and then they will come down.

WINTER'S LAST HEAVY SNOWFALL

Less than a Week before Opening of Spring One of Winter's Heaviest Storms Falls. Brilliant Electrical Display.

Within a few hours on Tuesday afternoon Adams County was covered with one of the heaviest snows of the season, lasting in the form in many instances to breaking, and making some country roads almost impassible.

The snow was heavy and clung to the limbs of the trees as it fell, converting the Round Top, Cody's Hill, the College Campus and all other places, where trees were scattered, into certain veritable fairylands. The telephone and light wires in town looked like long rope of snow and added to the beauty of the scene.

About half past six a main feed light wire came in contact with a tree on Carlisle street and as it swung back and forward against and away from the feed wire caused a very pretty light producing a remarkably beautiful illumination which could be seen for many miles Persons in the country who were on their way to town thought a heavenly phenomenon and hurried their horses to see it. Some horse breeds watched the light as it flashed intermittently.

Other wire trouble put the arcs out of commission for a short time and business places were without electric light for the greater portion of the evening, though lissome pore pol to work as soon as the trouble was discovered. Telephone wires were down in a number of places in town and the country.

If Arbor Day is to be properly observed, trees must be planted, and something of the importance of forestry and conservation be taught in the school and at the home.

ALREADY FILING THEIR PETITIONS

Candidates for County Offices Filing Papers Necessary to have their Names Printed on Ballots. Some Wait for Primary Date.

Petitions of candidates to have their names printed on the ballots of the several political parties at the coming primary election are being rapidly entered and filed by the county commissioners. According to the number of petitions issued there will be a record number of aspirants for the honors to be conferred by the voters of the county at the general election next fall.

The petitions must contain signatures of qualified electors equaling in number from 10 to 30. The election laws do not permit Republicans, Democrats, Prohibitionists and Socialists to sign petitions of persons other than those of their own political faith.

All the papers filed with the commissioners must be accompanied by signatures and these for ward officers to the secretary.

Many of the petitions will be filed as soon as the state ballots become available to them, but the spring primaries will be held the first Saturday in June, as provided by law, or the third Saturday before the general election for many politicians, owing to the expenses involved, will wait until the last moment possible to be held in June the last Saturday. A number of petitions for May 15, it says before the polls arise.

The various candidates are entirely responsible for the circulation of their petitions and many close contests are expected to be the result at the primaries.

The sum of $300.00 from the general treasury of the company has been set aside as a start for this fund. The interest on the invaluable fund and the interest each year will be allowed to accumulate so that there may be a substantial fund for use when needed.

The money which has been set aside for the purpose is the proceeds of fines fairs, donations, etc. It is hoped that the annual income may be larger the second year.

In order to show their own approval of the plan the members have made a success the finances have assumed a healthy condition and the treasury is now in a prosperous condition. Should public spirited citizens desire to contribute to the fund their donations will be very gratefully received.

Gettysburg's fire department has very fortunate in escaping injury at fires. The department has been unusually free from fatalities, and it is hoped that the fund may never be needed in the near future.

Efforts to change the route of the proposed new state highway from Gettysburg to York so as to include Hanover, will be made at the meeting of the Fruit Growers Association of Adams County, to be held in this city on Saturday afternoon. Fulton on "Cedar Rust or Orange Rust of Apple," the importance of destroying all cedar trees was held in which this matter was taken up and fully discussed. Owing to the serious damage caused by this disease in many Adams County orchards last season and the very great losses from Cedar Rust in some other sections where it has occurred, a stronger belief, and since the meeting a number of trees in the vicinity of Fruit Ridge have been cut down and the stubs treated so as to prevent sprouts. FAMOUS OLD INN IS PURCHASED

Monterey Inn which has Stood for Many Years on the Pretty Blue Ridge and Has Interesting Historic Purchased.

Monterey Inn, one of the famous old hostelries located on the Gettysburg turnpike, one mile from Fairfield, Va., has been purchased by Mrs Edward Hall, of Baltimore. The consideration was about $15,000. Mrs. Norris will at once expend between $5,000 and $10,000 on the structure.

The house faces the old Gettysburg turnpike, and thoroughfare along which tramped the columns of General Lee after the retreat from Gettysburg, stated at Gettysburg in 1863. Although the old house was visited by soldiers, the old house was not molested, and the valuable furniture that was put in it by the when erected yet remains.

The old house which is situated on a plot of about five acres of land, is literally opposite the Monterey Golf Club and in the midst of the Buffalo moss summer colony. The house was erected about 1760, and has had the main structure is of brick, frame additions having been made from time to time.

It has been long noted as a hostelry, and upon its register are the names of many well known persons since the home of officers of the world. The house has been closed for several years except for a large colony of those who love the beautiful Blue Ridge

COMPLETION OF EXTENSION

General Manager R. B. Sutton has announced that the extension of the line from Pen Mar to Highfield can be completed by May 1st, if the weather, it may be in working order by the middle of April.

A gang of men began laying ties and rails from Pen Mar last summer toward Highfield. Saturday. That work has progressed nearly 1000 feet. From Highfield to the state line there is two put down as far as the rock cut which is 1000 feet long. This has brought the front cut of the ground, which has been a task from the first time bespeaked somewhat by the mud.

For the past two weeks the work progress has been made in the work on account of snow, frost, rain and mud.

WOMAN OF GENIUS

There are people in the world who never act unnaturally yet never get on. On the contrary, they are the ones who are most intensely and yet always act so. The strange thing must be the fact that the fit few have a knack of living in their shoes the level of competition and the latest fashion.

My wife soon after we were married developed a passion for wing collared old trumpery. She attended every sale within a radius of fifty miles, my clerk or crony chair pot up for sale by auction, and I had to bid for her up to the house. As to bric-a-brac, she had a perfect mania for collecting, some routinely pitcher, sig at the gates and little else. Bottles were daily made to be knocked over. Then there was a craze for bookplates, linnen, pieces of armor, rugs so heavy that they required a porter to carry them over the floor, and finally an extensive series of drawers with pictures of the Royal Family, everything must soon be cheaper, in short, everything that was old and worn out. Then I made a stand.

A practical man, with no resources about me, I managed to keep the wolf from the door by literature. I had inherited £5,000 from my father, which I put in a savings bank at three and a per cent interest. It did not remain there long. Some genius responsible for auction purchases ate into it gradually. I could not say that we have been turned into a lot of miscellaneous lumber, but we have been forced to store it for only for a bankcoop.

Then came my friend Frieda who were as cross on this subject as herself. She was married to a clergyman and go from room to room admiring the old furniture and the old pots for a rag but that miniature of some of the woman of the house. I was sitting in a chintz chair with a cloth with a rather mighty weighing, when Frieda, who had been looking at a parcel of a dumpy cushion in winding. "Why, my dear," she said to her husband, "my £2.000 is reduced to £5,000."

"Five hundred! Then I made a mistake in the first place. I thought there was only three hundred. After all, it's not so bad."

"Not what?" I cried aghast.

"Why, dearest, I'll tell you how absolute great that it is genuine, and it is going to be worth."

"Oh, heavens," I muttered, shaking my head as I did so, "what a mistake! And to think what is to become of our poor children!"

Not set down beside me and put her hand on my knee. "Don't be foolish. Who could not say? We are not going to be poor. Why, I've got a fortune in my pocket. I'm sure that my progress has been made in the work on account of snow, frost, rain and mud.

Gutting home, I showed my wife for the first time the cushion and told her what I had done. She sat still when I began her to get rid of the rubbish, but when I had finished she said quietly, "Very well," replied. "I will send for Mr. Jacob. You make you a bid for the lot. We may not a few hundred dollars over."

"Leave that to me, dear," she replied. "I'll manage it." I left the conference, and I will do all that is necessary."

The next day the morning paper announced that Mr. Jacob's auctioneering was to sell at auction her treasures on the following day. Several new members were admitted and Samuel Bushman was elected treasurer of the organization.

At sight of this announcement I felt that my wife had been overreaching the rubbage was to be sold.

For days before the sale I was beset by dealers. They called at the house, at their bands eating me what such a cushion would be worth if it were in a sale. I turned away from all, saying that I left the matter in my wife's hands. I should probably a dollar would secure anything I had to sell. I was asked for a large price.

Then the sale came off. I was beset by all the offers making a trial balance of the proceeds, and I was told that everybody and gone, and I found my wife in the drawing room. She was in the house devoid of the treasury of it just as when I left it in the morning.

"Where's the money?" I asked.

"Here," she said, producing a check.

"How much?"

"Two hundred and seventy-five pounds."

"Is that all?"

"Yes, dear, that's all."

"Why, you silly fool, I have absolutely given that it is genuine, and it is going to be worth."

"Oh, heavens," I muttered, shaking my head as I did so, "what a mistake! And to think what is to become of our poor children!"

Not set down beside me and put her hand on my knee. "Don't be foolish. Who could not say? We are not going to be poor. Why, I've got a fortune in my pocket. I'm sure that my progress has been made in the work on account of snow, frost, rain and mud.

MANY PLANT TREES TO BEAUTIFY TOWNS

Suggestions For Their Care in the Fall and Winter.

SELECT THE SMALL SPECIMENS

Large Ones Not Recommended, as Their Growth is Questionable—How to Keep Them From Being Damaged—Other Suggestions.

If you have only a few trees in your lawn and are unable to attractive, talk trees and shrubs to your roundings, agitate the question among the neighbors of your town and towns and then planted in the streets and whereever they will tend to improve the community you live in. Pertinent suggestions on this line are given in the Chicago Tribune by J. H. Frost, Chicago city forester, who says:

Now is the time for efficient and improvement associations to make preparations to do fall planting.

Many communities already have ordered trees in large numbers to be divided among their members according to the land owned. This is a praiseworthy expression of civic pride. Besides, the association can get them much more reasonable by ordering all the trees needed for individuals and not one from the same nursery.

Remember the essentials of tree planting. Get a small tree about two or one and one-half inches in diameter one foot from the ground. The large trees are apt to be root-pruned since their growth is questionable. Remember that trees are first grown by making a box somewhat larger than required by the root system, ay cent three feet in diameter and about two feet deep and place a tree in it and one-half inch tree. Fill the box with fine earth, tramp it down so that roots cannot fail, or purchased from a reliable nursery.

Whenever possible all the leaves should be left on the trees and not raked or left lying on the ground. They furnish a natural mulch for the trees and soil which is as good as any fertilizer. All leaves and wood and brush should be removed at this time of the year before planting. Trees in formal rows are not to be encouraged.

Wire netting or fertilizer may be applied to your trees and shrubs at this time. Wire netting of fine mesh should be spread over the ground around the trees and shrubs, lying until spring when it may be raked together and burned or buried in the ground.

All leaves and wood and brush should be removed at this time of the year before planting. Trees in formal rows are not to be encouraged.

The simplest rule to follow in trimming evergreens is to trim like the old the dead wood, withered branches, and those that overcrowd, as they often are seen. All living branches which are symmetrical should be left on and early in the spring.

Wire netting can be made with a sharp saw, without. The saw should be sharp and the teeth set wide. The cut should be made with a quick motion, and the cut should be left smooth or with a slanting surface. Large limbs or wood should then be covered with a heavy coat of paint to keep out the moisture and rot spores.

Cavities that have been neglected and cavities have formed in the trunk or large branches should be dug out to stop the increase of the spreading, for this cutting will continue until the opening has become so long as to endanger the proper growth of the tree and very often the entire center has been destroyed.

In cases where the life of a tree can be prolonged by filling in the cavity should be carefully scraped and painted with coal tar creosote and then filled with cement. Do not use it thorough wash with a spreading solution of copperas.

Jack's Return

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

Meagle was a ticket taker—that is, she belonged to Peter Smith—in the Hippodrome. Her work was draping for drama and posing for tableaux. One day from a ship that had just entered the port came up to where Meagle was draping for drama. It was commanded by the man's brother, a sea captain of standing, and when Meagle stepped work and saw that the man was looking at her ashore, shading her eyes from the sun, she knew that it was Jack. He was on her white neck, her shapely feet, her stove or corset and the moment the officer rejoiced at the sight. There was a certain expression in Jack's eyes that struck his fancy. And he was equally struck.

When Jack Winslow sailed away he left his heart behind him and carried a heart with him. He would not be at that port again for three years, and Meagle's friends all said: "Give him enough a get a dozen sweethearts! Sailors have one in every port." But Meagle was not that kind. They all knew that her innocent heart, pure brain and sweet disposition were a reserve from the tenderness enter her had not captured.

Letters were not frequent between them. Jack was always on the move, moving, and communication was not easy. But when a letter came to Meagle it was all the more precious. She would take it somewhere by a day of two, that she might revel in the satisfaction of knowing that it was there. Often, toasting at some foreign port, Jack would drink to "my sweetheart" and would go up in the forecyp to read the cherished epistle when no one was looking.

One day Meagle opened a letter from Jack and found that he had married. She was fairly a month before she could say that and answered. Meagle ran away to the top of a three story house and sat down in the easy grass that was growing there. She was not thinking of Jack when she first read the letter. She was thinking of herself. She was not a girl who could be easily wounded, but she was not one to be trifled with. Her heart was not to be given away and taken back. Jack had received, and he had given his own innocent bosom. But those about her knew nothing of that sacred exchange and bespoused to her, and all shook hands with her and said, "I told you so." A man who bows a suitor is always to be pitied. She had given her heart away for a toy civilized creature that he could not appreciate, and she was to be the sufferer.

This happened about a year after Jack had sailed away. Then Meagle's little brother Ben was throwing stones at a cat in the back yard when Uggling for chaos. A large stone he threw struck her in the temple. Meagle was in the house at the time and she was made at her work. But one day soon after Ben's misfortune she went to get a letter from on a ship that was coming in. She had been disappointed before the eye that remained open. In fact, she had come to the habit of this eye—it was on the side of her head—and when she felt it was open—was completely hot. Then it became dim, and she knew that there was in eighteen months of the time the eye was closed, and it was never to be unbandaged.

Before as was this calamity, it was quite unnoticeable, but now it made an appointment in her love. She felt that she could never be the same to Jack that she had been before. She had received Jack's letter. She began at once to write him, telling him everything, but she could not get used to the loss of her eye.

Her only comfort was that she believed that Jack would not know it and that he would never have any other sweetheart. Then she began to write him. She knew that the sailor was true to her in his own peculiar way. Besides, he was writing her with his unfaithfulness. Under the circumstances, a one sided blind people develop the sense of touch to a degree of perfection that persons who sees can not. She felt that Jack had sailed in was coming to her and would come to her. She began to get away by herself. But in these days she was obliged to go to work and letting the house fell herself elegant in it just as she had done in the days when Jack was spoken in Jack Winslow's fashionable.

"My trouble will not be known," she said, "it is all right." And she went to her work.

The trouble that Jack had spoken of to his letter was the loss of his property. Meagle at Hampton he had caught a fever that left him with a scar across his face, which had been handsome before. It was this that had induced him to write to Meagle that he was not to see her in the days of his sickness, and, as he had not received a letter from her, he had returned in his

ARTHUR DOUGLASS DEATH TAKES AGAIN ARRESTED

Proprietor of Hotel Gettysburg Has Arthur Douglass Arrested Charged with Entering a Dwelling. Denies Evil Intentions.

Arthur Douglass, more generally known as "Yellow," was arrested on Tuesday by Constable Charles H. Wilt on charges of entering a dwelling with unlawful intent to commit a felony.

The charges were brought by Dr. C. R. Trebilly, of the Hotel Gettysburg.

Dr. Trebilly found Douglass in the kitchen of the hotel at half past one on Monday evening and this morning had him arrested. Douglass is an employee of the Wabash. The proprietor of the Gettysburg has been advising articles recently but has been unable to catch any of the guilty parties and upon finding the stranger there drew his conclusions.

Douglass claims that he is entirely innocent of any improper intentions in entering the hotel. He claims that during the evening Leonard Richards the night man at the Gettysburg, asked him to come and help him with his work. Douglass says he first refused fearing that the management of the hotel would object but later decided to help. He went up to the place, entered the kitchen and was sitting on a chair, he says, when Dr. Trebilly came in. They walked out to the front of the hotel and after talking a while he left and went up town with a friend.

Later he returned to the hotel but could see nothing of Sampson and did not stay.

Douglass says that he was astonished when the warrant was read to him, that he had done nothing unless and real there is no reason why he should be held. He is now on parole from a sentence in the Eastern Penitentiary.

At a hearing before Squire Barnhart on Tuesday Douglass was held in Court

MEXICAN REFORM MAY BRING PEACE

Compromise Arranged Between Diaz and Rebel Leaders.

WAS PLANNED IN NEW YORK

Limantour Said to Have Afforded Agreement With Insurrectos While Will Send the Reverts.

New York, March 17.—The sudden departure from New York of Mr. Limantour, the Mexican Minister of Finance, after a week of conferences and negotiations, the general success of which had not hitherto been clear, is now explained by the understanding that he has succeeded in effecting a tentative plan by which substantial reforms are expected to be immediately put in force by the Mexican government and the leading insurrectionists to end in revolutionary peace.

The presence at the Hotel Astor of Mr. Madero, the leader of the revolutionary movement in the north, is the strongest evidence of this agreement. The fact that Limantour left New York three generations, the confidential adviser of the Madero family, the fact that Limantour and the secret Madero have been in conference, while important messages have been going back and forth from the Astor minister to Mexico City, added significance to the situation.

While in Paris, before he left for New York, Limantour declared in an interview his belief in the need of a number of reforms to meet the just wishes of the insurrectos. When he left he said:

"Mistakes have been made, perhaps some of them serious, but the fact is not peculiar to Mexico. Many reforms have been instituted during recent years. Others of even greater importance are under way and will be immediately put in the near future."

After the conferences with Francisco Madero, Jr., Mr. Limantour received a long telegram from Mexico City, which he regarded as sufficient to warrant him in immediately setting out for the capital of the country.

The Maderos were asked a number of pointed questions. Terms could not be perfected, they said, without the concurrence of their brothers in the field. They expressed their distrust of any promises that the Mexican government might make, and said it would be impossible to accept propositions, if it were to be made a condition precedent that the rebels first lay down their arms, since that would mean that the leaders would be hanged on a preliminary measure of the government to end the war.

"The insurrectos," they said, "demand radical reforms and a thorough change in the personnel of the administration by having fair elections."

Simultaneously a dispatch from Mexico announces that President Diaz, in a conference with a number of citizens of Mexititlan, assured them that he was adopting some of Limantour's suggestions of reform meant them the hurry of greedy senators and the selling of them at cheap rates to the people. The Limantour bears with him a full exposition of the demands of the revolutionary leaders, which he hopes will be accepted by the Madero government and made the basis of peace.

Request of Release of Slott and Company Refused by Diaz.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—The request of the United States government to the government of President Diaz for the release of Slott and Company, the Americans who were captured by the revolutionists, were rejected, according to the American secretary, on American soil, has so far surely drawn from the Mexican embassy a repetition, word for word, of its first commercial denial. The fact of capture was made on American territory.

Slott and Company were captured on undisputed American soil at a point on the Rio Grande opposite Candelaria, Chihuahua, according to the state department. The scene of capture, state department officials assert, does not lie within the Chemisal tract, which Diaz and the ex-envoy of El Paso, Tex., and the ownership of which is now the subject of negotiation between the United States and Mexico.

Where the men were taken from Rio Grande has shifted for course at various times. They say it is pointed out, however, does not make any counter to the question in connection with the case, as the course, as placed by the engineers, is definitely removed from the line in question. It is the contention of the state department that the

NINETY MEMBERS IN ASSOCIATION

Monthly Meeting of Parent Teachers Association Held Friday Evening in New High School Building, Membership Numbers Ninety.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent—Teachers' Association held on Friday evening in the High school building was well attended by a large percentage of the membership with some members absent.

The entertainment part of the program consisted of a duet in Civics and a flag song by the pupils of the 4 Grammar School, and a reading by Miss Tarwney and Alice Miller.

President Greenlee of the College made the principal address of the evening, his subject being "The Value of Education" He favorably emphasized the necessity of not only a common and high school education but also of the young men and young women of today to day going to college.

Dr. Greenlee called the attention of the association to the fact that this is a good business proposition. Statistics show that the average earning power of the cottage graduate is $600 a year higher than the non cottage graduate. This means the extra investment at six percent or $10,000. The speaker called attention to what opportunities would be displayed by the young people of to day if they thought they could acquire a capital of $10,000 in four years invested in perfectly safe securities and once which they could not lose.

"Hustling in the Home" was discussed by a number of the members. Mrs. Will M. Sellgman emphasized the importance of an intelligent selection of the reading materials for boys and girls. Rev. D. W. Woods told of the beneficial effects of reading matter which should not fall into the hands of the young people, and he took special exception to the comic supplements of the Sunday newspapers. Mrs. H. Hilton Roth said that home reading should be begun early and should be conducted to privileges rather than a duty. Mrs. Miles Cope told of the good results of family reading aloud to each other. Prof. W. A. Rose said that the advisability of having a dictionary in the home and Rev. C. W. Hoover likewise made a short talk.

The reading of "Americo" closed the meeting.

FORGED CHECKS

Alfred Yoha, a son of Chelsea Yoha, of the Pigeon Hills, near the York County line, forged three checks on Abraham Hoke, of Springvale, one to the checks, for $80, he passed on Dr. Zollers Hardware, for $10 and the other on a second one, for $3, at Baker's store, Hanover, and the last one at the hotel at Parnova.

When Yoha presented the check for $80 at the National Bank at Jefferson the bank officials telephoned to the Pergeon National Bank at Springtown to ascertain if Mr. Hoke had funds there to meet the check. Answer being ordered that he had, the Jefferson bank paid the check. After the check arrived at the bank there it was discovered that Mr. Hoke's name had been forged.

Yoha was arrested, charged with forgery, but his mother-in-law, Mrs. John Landis, fixed up the matter by paying back the amounts of the checks incurred, whereupon Yoha was released, so far nothing has been done regarding the other checks.

Group of Men, Discussing Love of Gettysburg People for Joining Things, Discover that there are Forty Associations in Town.

That Gettysburg is a town of "joiners" seems to be generally known, but that there are no less than forty organizations in the town exclusive of all church and social societies is not realized. A group of men in discussing the matter compiled the following list:

Three separate Masonic bodies, Odd Fellows, Order of Independent Americans Patriotic Order Sons of America, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Columbus, Elks, Eagles, Owls, Royal Arcanum, Women of Woodcraft, Daughters of Rebecca, Daughters of Liberty, Grand Army of the Republic, Women's Relief Corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Pennsylvania College League, Sons of Veterans Reserves, Law and Order Society, Retail Merchants Association, Retail Coal Dealers Association, Ad Club, Gettysburg Driving Club, Parent-Teachers' Association, Gettysburg Fire Department, Band of Hope, Gettysburg Automobile Club, Women's Temperance League, Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, Gettysburg Ministerial Association, Civic Club, Catholic High School Alumni Association, Gettysburg High School Alumni Association, Daughters of American Revolution, Property Owners' Association, Young Men's Christian Association, Adams County Bar Association, Gettysburg Group of Pennsylvania Historians, Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

FLAG AGAIN BALKS LINEMEN

For the second time within a week, the American flag has been brought to the front as a means of balking telephone linemen extending the Bell line from York Springs to Dillsburg.

On Thursday when employees of the Bell Telephone Company were about to raise a pole near the home of Jacob Sharp, Harry Arnold jumped into the hole the workmen had dug for the new protests, and remained there for more than an hour, while Mr. Sharp attempted to roll the pole on him and do all sorts of bodily injury. At length the men began work elsewhere and promptly took advantage of their absence. He secured a small American flag. Placing the choir over the hole, with the flag over it, he says he is there until now. While the men were eating dinner he secured the flag, covered the hole and nailed the pole to his lawn. There was nothing for the men with the flag fastened to it and now defer them to remove the hands.

FINAL SERVICE IN ST. JAMES

Farewell Service in Old Lutheran Church. History of Congregation and its House of Worship. Short Operations.

St. James church—standing for more than three quarters of a century—four generations of worshipers, will assemble for the last time in its present form as the scene of its most zealous care Sunday when a farewell service to the old church will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Reed.

All day Sunday was devoted to silent meditation by members of the congregation which has stood for so many years. In the morning at 10 o'clock the pastor and the congregation, who wished it, were taken by the electric cars, chartered by the Young Men's Brotherhood. In the afternoon at the Sunday school service talks were given by George W. Spangler, superintendent of the school for many years, from 1871 to 1891, by R. William Bream, Dr. J. A. Clutz and J. B. Remsberg.

The evening church service was the farewell to the old church. Rev. Dr. Baker preached an appropriate sermon from the text: "Ashes, ashes, dust," the sanctuary of the Lord God." Dr. Clutz made another address suggesting the congregation look on their church edifice as ever a new church and on their institution to take up the task.

St. James Lutheran congregation was organized in 1807. Before that time they had worshiped with the Reformed congregation on a church which stood on the site of the present Trinity Reformed church. The first church was erected in 1837-8 and in 1857 it was remodeled, the tower being added, the Sunday School being enlarged by cutting the transepts and the entire interior of that room and numerous other changes and additions made.

Eleven pastors have served the congregation since its organization Doctors Kolfer Essick, Assmth, Brobst, Benge, Heindel, Enders, Daniel Stock, Spielmann, A. R. Steck, Clutz and Rev. Joseph S. Baker.

CARRIERS WALK 40 MILES DAILY

Gettysburg's Town Mail Carriers Cover that Much Ground in Making their Daily Rounds. Work Faster than in Nearby Towns.

The three city carriers who daily deliver mail to the homes and business places of Gettysburg walk 40 miles each day or an average of 19 1-2 miles each.

During a period of six days the Post Office Department received note to be taken of a number of different things and some interesting figures are the result. The city carriers in Gettysburg carry an average of 22 1-2 pounds a day, made up of 548 pieces. In six days the three carriers delivered 13200 pieces of mail weighing 6600 pounds. The local office has 4496 patrons served by carriers. This number includes almost three fourths of the students in the various institutions, a very small proportion of the Seminary, College and Prep boys getting their mail at the office. Each carrier serves an average of 1500 people. There are 1100 boxes, or other stopping places making an average of 367 for each carrier. For collection there are 60 collection boxes, one package and two combination boxes.

At all the nearby towns similar statistics have been taken, Gettysburg is ahead of some of her neighbors in several respects. In Chambersburg only 5 per cent of the patrons served have mail receptacles at their homes and the carriers may put their mail and they save the time lost in waiting for an answer to a doorbell. In Gettysburg there are 50 per cent of the homes so equipped.

The carriers were aimed in the matter of "waiting" their mail—getting it in order for delivery. Gettysburg's carriers average 21 pieces a minute, Chambersburg's 16 and Waynesboro's 12.
